

FLORIDA GETS MOST BIG LEAGUE CAMPS

Fifteen Major League Clubs Have Chosen Their Training Camps, Only the Cleveland Naps Being Undecided Where to Go—Toronto Disposes of Old Timers.

Philadelphia, December 30.—All of the major league clubs, with the exception of Cleveland, have selected their training camps for next year. The Cleveland officials wanted to go to Macon, Ga., but Manager Stallings, of the Boston Braves, beat them to that place. Now the Naps have decided to go to Athens, Ga., provided arrangements can be made there for the use of the college stadium.

The training camps decided upon for next spring are as follows:

American League.
Athletics—Jacksonville, Fla.
Washington—Arlington, Va.
Chicago—Paso Robles, Cal.
Boston—Hot Springs, Ark.
Detroit—Gulfport, Miss.
New York—Houma, Tex.
St. Louis—St. Petersburg, Fla.

National League.
Phillies—Wilmington, N. C.
New York—Marlin, Tex.
Pittsburgh—Hot Springs, Ark.
Chicago—Paso Robles, Cal.
Boston—Macon, Ga.
Brooklyn—Atlanta, Ga.
Cincinnati—Mobile, Ala.
St. Louis—St. Petersburg, Fla.

Baseball camps are certainly like a lot of nomads in the spring. They are continually shifting around from place to place.

Major League Clubs.
At least eight major league clubs have selected different places to train next year from where they went in 1913. The only clubs that have what might be called permanent training camps are the Giants, the Boston Americans and the Pittsburgh Nationals. The latter are thinking of giving up Hot Springs, owing to difficulty regarding the playing field. In every other respect the club officials are much pleased with Hot Springs.

Florida has the call at present. With our major league teams training there next spring the opportunities for inter-league contests during the training season are immense. Should the games between the Athletics and the Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals will next spring more big league teams will undoubtedly be attracted to that State.

Old-Timers Siding.
Joe Kelley, manager of the Toronto club, of the International League, has disposed of a number of former major league players this fall. He has sent Harry Bemis, formerly the star catcher of Cleveland, to Memphis. "Peaches" Graham, formerly of the Braves, has been sent to Venice, Cal. Tim Lincecum, who was a homerun king with Brooklyn, has been sent to the Western League. Amby McConnell, formerly of the Boston Red Sox, has been given a ticket to Atlanta, while Johnny Lush, once a member of the Phillies, has also been sent to a Southern League club, and Ed Holly has been released to the Canadian League.

The places of nearly all these players will be taken by players who formerly drew pay from major league clubs.

Murray Wins Bet.
Billy Murray, the former manager of the Phillies, won a bet from President Baker, of the Quakers, at last week's meeting. During a fanning bee one evening Murray, who is a close student of human nature, remarked:

"You know, Mr. Baker, you can never find out the exact place that a Southerner comes from. Ask any Southerner, and he takes a whole State as his native place. Ask a Northerner, and he will tell you he is from Pennsylvania, Pa.; Oklahoma, Wis., or Wisconsin, N. J. But ask a Southerner and you can never get any definite information."

Murray's statement didn't appear logical, and an argument resulted.

"All right," said Murray. "I'll bet you I can prove my statement."

The bet was made. Then Murray called to Irving Cobb, the well-known short-story writer, to join the party.

After Cobb was introduced Murray quietly remarked:

"Never Tell Native Towns."

"By the way, Mr. Cobb, I believe you are a Southerner."

"I am," replied Cobb.

"What part of the South are you from?" asked Murray.

"From Kentucky," replied Cobb.

There was a laugh from the members of the party. Then the joke was explained to Cobb.

Hozeman Bulger, the baseball writer, was then spotted, and he was also asked to join the party.

After a little conversation, Murray turned to Bulger and asked:

"You are from the South, 'Boze,' are you?"

"Sure I am," replied Bulger.

"What place in the South are you from?" inquired Murray.

"From Alabama," proudly declared Bulger.

"'Boze' couldn't understand what the laugh was about until the nature of the bet was told to him.

President Baker paid his bet. But Cobb hasn't told yet his native town his birthplace in Alabama.

nished a big surprise when he nosed out La Estrella in the opening race. Rose of Jeddah, the receding favorite in the third, was outrun all the way.

Curlicue, showing sudden improvement over his former start, took the race from Clinton in a sharp drive.

The stewards took cognizance of the improved race, but the further out he was refused. To further add to the troubles of his owner, Curlicue was fined $200 over his entered selling price.

Jackey, Drayce and Carter were each given a suspension of ten days by the starter.
